GO ALGO

Step 6: Click on Install Matlab

Step 7: Click on download and Continue shown below

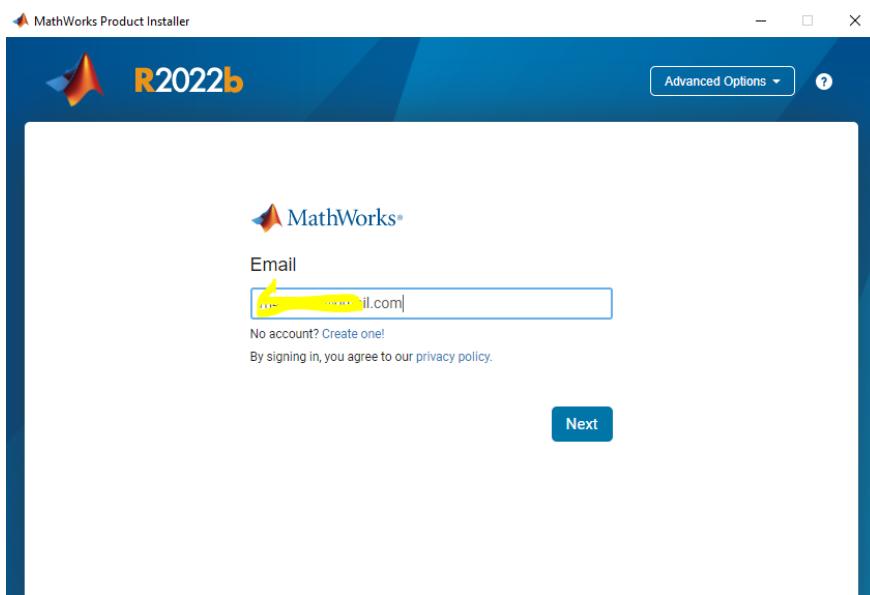

The screenshot shows the MATLAB Downloads page for R2022b. The 'Select Release' dropdown is set to 'R2022b'. The main content area is titled 'Get MATLAB and Simulink Products' and displays a trial expiration date of 11 Feb 2023. It provides links to MATLAB and Simulink documentation and includes a 'Download for Windows' button. The button is highlighted with a yellow box, indicating it should be clicked. Below the button, it says 'Includes R2022b Update 3' and 'Released: 22 Dec 2022'. The right sidebar contains links for 'About R2022b', 'Latest Features', 'Release Notes', and 'System Requirements'.

Step 8: Save the installer file and install MATLAB on your system.

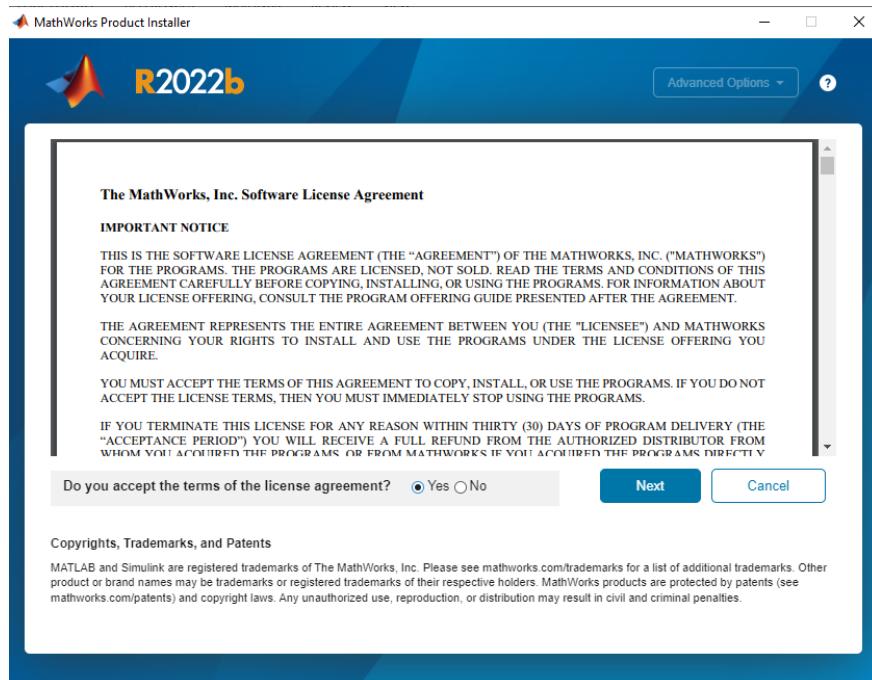

The screenshot shows the same MATLAB Downloads page for R2022b, but now the 'Download for Windows' button has been clicked. A large yellow progress bar at the top indicates the download is in progress. The main content area now shows the download details: 'matlab_R2022b_win64.exe (228 MB; MD5: bcf6431eb6ec91138c2ea0b0e2e10d54)'. It also says 'Your installer is downloading to your browser's download folder.' and 'Launch the installer and sign in as [REDACTED]@mail.com.' The right sidebar remains the same as in the previous step.
